

CATHEDRAL MASS AT 2.30 A. M.

NIGHTWORKERS CELEBRATE 10TH YEAR OF THE SERVICE.

Archbishop Farley Present and Delivers a Message From the Pope—Bishop McFaul of Trenton in His Sermon Suggests a Code of Newspaper Ethics.

Fifth avenue had been tucked in bed a good while yesterday morning when the workers from the downtown newspapers came to attend the celebration at 2.30 A. M. of the tenth anniversary of the early morning mass for newspaper men and night workers that was held in St. Patrick's Cathedral. As the first notes of the professional rang out nearly every seat in the big church was taken.

Archbishop Farley, with the ministers of the mass, took his seat on the throne in the sanctuary. With him were the Right Rev. Mr. J. J. Lavelle, vicar-general of the diocese, and the Right Rev. Mr. P. J. Hayes, chancellor of the diocese. Later the most Rev. John B. Pitaval, Archbishop of Santa Fe, N. M., who is here as the guest of Archbishop Farley, took a seat among the clergy.

Among those in the church were Justice John W. Goff, Justice Victor J. Dowling, Eugene A. Philbin, Borough Presidents Cyrus C. Miller, Lawrence Greaser and George Cromwell, Robert Adamson, secretary to the Mayor; Lieut.-Gov. Conway, Dr. Louis Moran Mooney, Sheriff John N. Shea, Justice John J. Delany, Assistant District Attorney James A. Delehaney and Justice E. J. McCall.

Cardinal Gibbons sent his regrets and with them a message of good wishes. Regrets came from President Taft, Gov. Dix, Chief Justice White of the United States Supreme Court, Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston, Bishop McDonnell of Brooklyn and others.

Archbishop John M. Farley was the celebrant. The Rev. Luke J. Evers, pastor of St. Andrew's and founder of the night workers' mass, acted as assistant priest. The deacon of the mass was the Rev. Walter Gilmore, and the sub-deacon the Rev. Dr. Anthony Palsi, both of St. Andrew's. The deacons of honor were the Rev. P. J. Lyons, pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, Boston, where a mass for night workers is celebrated on Sunday mornings, and the Rev. Charles Evers of Baltimore, a cousin of the pastor of St. Andrew's here. Mr. James V. Lewis was master of ceremonies. Bishop McFaul of Trenton was the preacher. He spoke of the American daily newspaper, its mission, its defects and their remedy. Said he:

What is the remedy for the defects of the daily press? Pope Pius X. when he ascended the papal throne struck the keynote of the twentieth century: "To reestablish all things in Christ." Journalism too must return to the Ten Commandments. This is the real remedy for the defects of the daily newspaper.

It has been suggested that a remedy might be found in drastic legislation, that the law of libel should be made stricter. Undoubtedly the press is just as amenable to the law as the individual, still I hesitate to recommend the enactment of severe laws lest they might unduly restrict the freedom of the press. A free press in a free country is a necessity, and it would therefore be deplorable to encroach upon its legitimate freedom. It seems to me that newspaper men should get together and form a code of ethics similar to those adopted by physicians and lawyers and bind themselves to adhere to them upon their honor as journalists.

At the close of the service Archbishop Farley in full pontifical vestments, wearing his mitre and carrying the crozier of his episcopal authority ascended the pulpit to impart to the congregation the special blessing which the Pope had commissioned him to give.

"It would be wrong for me to detain you here long at this hour," said the Archbishop, "but as head of this diocese I must speak to you, and I have displayed as shown by this splendid gathering. It has been a source of edification to the community at large to know that even at this early hour every Sunday morning there are so many of our good Catholics willing and even anxious to fulfill the obligation of assisting at the Holy Sacrifice."

"The knowledge of it has been one of my greatest consolations. I feel that it would be out of place to offer you my congratulations, for you feel that you are only doing your duty, and the same is true of good Father Evers, your pastor. When in the course of my work I visited the Holy Father in Rome and explained to him the purpose of the early morning mass he was deeply touched and sent you his special blessing, praying that it might remain with you and your families eternally."

CRIMINAL LAW REFORM.

Two Day Conference on the Subject to Be Held Here This Week.

President Taft, Attorney-General Wickham and others will speak at a dinner at the Hotel Astor next Saturday evening which will bring to a close a conference on the reform of criminal law and procedure. The President will make a special trip from Washington to speak on the law's delay. Attorney-General Wickham will follow with an important message on the general subject of the prosecution of offenders.

Six organizations will combine to hold three conferences at Earl Hall, Columbia University, on Friday and Saturday, May 12 and 13. "The Relation of the Police to the Crime Wave" will be treated by Chief Magistrate McAdoo. "The Magistrate's Courts" will be analyzed by Alfred Page. Julian W. Mack, formerly judge of the Children's Court of Chicago and now judge of the United States Commerce Court, will come from Washington to discuss "The State and the Child." The difficulties of extradition in the case of deserting husbands and other offenders will be treated by Prof. John Bassett Moore of Columbia University.

On Saturday morning, May 13, William M. Evans will discuss "The Nature of Crime." Prof. Franklin H. Giddings of Columbia University "The Relation of the Criminal to Society," while Charles C. Nott, Assistant District Attorney, will point out certain inadequacies in present day criminal trials.

In the afternoon at Earl Hall the general topic will be the responsibility of crime. The question of expert evidence in criminal trials will be discussed by Dr. Carlos F. Macdonald, the alienist. Howard S. Gans will show the consequences of "Unenforceable Legislation" and Prof. Felix Adler will speak on the "Ethics of Punishment."

THE WEATHER THIS WEEK.

Reasonably High Temperature East of the Rockies. No indications of a storm. B. Washington, May 7.—The Weather Bureau has issued the following forecast for the week:

"The general pressure distribution over the northern hemisphere is such as to indicate that the coming week will be one of seasonably high temperature in practically all districts east of the Rocky Mountains and relatively high temperatures over the western plateau region and the Pacific States. There are no indications of a general storm to cross the country during the coming days, but the rainfall of the next several days will be high and local and continued principally to the middle West and north Pacific States."

DIX C. S. COMMISSION RAD.

C. S. Reformers Criticize It—But It Ought to Control the Good Local Commission.

The executive committee of the Civil Service Reform Association, whose annual report was given out yesterday, does not look with favor upon recent events in Albany. The only member of Gov. Dix's Civil Service Commission of whom it approves is Mr. Ludvig, of whom it says: "The courageous stand he has taken in opposition to his colleagues on requests for wholesale exemptions from competition entitles him to great credit."

The association puts up much of the action of the new commission to Commissioner Kraft, its president, on the ground that the other members, lacking previous experience, have relied largely on his judgment.

"The attitude of the majority of the commission has indicated so clearly a lack of sympathy with the spirit and purpose of the civil service law and so marked a willingness to use their powers to further partisan ends," the committee states, "that this committee has felt fully justified in publishing resolutions calling for the removal of Commissioners Kraft and Burton."

The committee opposes the so-called Gaylor charter. "The fact that the charter is not Mayor Gaylor's own work," the report says, "may account for its startling civil service provisions which are so diametrically opposed to the views he has hitherto expressed on the merit system." The association is "utterly opposed" to the charter in its present form. The civil service provisions of the proposed charter, the report says, are "wholly destructive of the merit system as it has been built up through a long series of years in this city."

The supervision and control of the local civil service commission by the State commission, which the charter avowedly proposes to eliminate, the association regards as "absolutely essential to prevent the merit system from becoming the football in the game of local politics."

In contrast with the situation in the State and with the provisions of the proposed charter, the association finds that Mayor Gaylor's "firm and advanced attitude in favor of thorough enforcement of the civil service law in accordance with the principles underlying it" has been maintained, and that his civil service commissioners also are in sympathy with the purposes of the law, although they have made mistakes due to inexperience.

HANNAH WHITALL SMITH DEAD.

A Philadelphia Quaker and a Religious Leader in England.

Hannah Whitall Smith, formerly of Philadelphia, who died May 1 at her home in England, in the eightieth year of her age, was widely known as H. W. S., the signature over which her writings appeared. Mrs. Smith was born in Philadelphia in 1832 of a well known Quaker family. She was educated in Miss Mary Anna Longstrech's famous Quaker school. In 1851 she married Robert Pearsall Smith, also a Philadelphia Quaker, who, like his wife, later became a noted evangelist.

For a number of years Mrs. Smith conducted large bible classes for women in Philadelphia, and the Smith home became the rallying point of religious workers in the city. In 1875 and 1876 Mrs. Smith went to England and held religious conferences at Broadlands, Lord Mount Temple's country seat, and in Norwich, Oxford and Brighton, which were attended by hundreds of men and women, many of them clergymen, of every denomination and nationality.

After her marriage Mrs. Smith and her husband lived for many years in London, where Mrs. Smith lived for twenty-three years. There, as in the United States, she became a religious leader and one of the notable women speakers and reformers. For years she was secretary of the British organization of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and she was closely allied with the English women's suffrage movement. Her many books and tracts on religious subjects have been translated into many languages. Mrs. Smith is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Bernhard Berenson, the wife of the art critic, herself a critic and writer on art and Alys, wife of Hon. Bertrand Russell, the Cambridge mathematician, and by a son, Logan Pearsall Smith, a writer on historical and literary subjects.

BRADFORD A. BULLOCK DEAD.

Taken Ill at the New York Athletic Club Where He Had Lived for Two Years.

Bradford A. Bullock, a lawyer, who had lived at the New York Athletic Club for two years, died in his room at the club last night. Mr. Bullock had not been well for several days and had remained in his room. Yesterday morning he was much worse and Dr. Edward L. Creeden was called. Dr. Creeden was with the patient much of yesterday and a trained nurse was brought in. In the evening Mr. Bullock sank rapidly. He died a few minutes before 11 o'clock, apparently of heart disease.

Mr. Bullock was born in Jackson, Ind., on December 3, 1862. He was admitted to the bar in 1887. On May 1, 1887, he was married to Harriet Emeline Nowlin of Terre Haute, Mo. Mr. Bullock was connected for a time with the American Legal News of Detroit and with the business department of several other papers. Since 1897 he had been in a business which he himself originated and called "attorney to attorneys." He represented attorneys in several other cities and was one of the organizers of the Commercial Law League. He was a member of the New York Athletic Club and the Fox Hills Golf Club.

HE WAS A SILK THROWSTER.

Col. John H. Hopper About the Last of His Profession in This Country.

Col. John H. Hopper, a silk throwster, died yesterday at his home, 216 Broadway, Paterson, N. J. He had been ill three weeks. He was 69 years old. Thirty-three years ago he engaged in the business of silk throwing and was said to be one of those in that business in this country.

He was the oldest son of the late Judge John Hopper. For thirty years he figured in the legal and political affairs of New Jersey. When the Spanish-American war started he went to Jacksonville with the Fifth Regiment as Quartermaster. He retired with the rank of Colonel. He was a member of the Holland Society of America.

GEN. HANCOCK'S WIDOW DIES.

Resumed First Husband's Name After Separation From Second.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 7.—News of the death of Mrs. Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock, as she has preferred to call herself, after several years following separation from Elliott Dorr of Boston, her second husband, has been received by her son-in-law, C. O. Peil, who lives near Memphis. Following her marriage to Gen. Hancock just before his campaign for President, Mrs. Hancock settled on a plantation near Clarksville, Miss., where she has since lived.

Obituary Notes.

John E. Metcalf, who carried messages from President Lincoln to Gen. Sherman when Sherman was on his march to the sea, died at his home, 45 West 14th St., New York, yesterday. He had been ailing for several months. He was 69 years old at the time of his death. He was a native of the Seventh Regiment, New York Volunteer Infantry, when the war started and was assigned to duty as a messenger. He lived in New York for thirty-five years. He was a supervisor in the Newark school system and had been a member of the Newark board of education for many years. He was active in Republican politics and in fraternal orders. He is survived by his wife, three sons and four daughters.

MEETS DEATH IN FOREST FIRE

ONE OF THREE MEN IN CABIN CUT OFF FROM ESCAPE.

Many Fires in Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Maine Destroy Timber and Threaten Towns and Villages—Thousands of Men Out Fighting Flames.

PROVIDENCE, May 7.—Forest fires today swept over territory estimated at ten square miles in Rhode Island and the neighboring parts of Massachusetts. In South Kingston three men were cut off and one was burned to death. The damage will amount to many thousands of dollars.

The most serious fire began near Larkins Pond, in the town of South Kingston, early in the day. The village of Kingston, near the Rhode Island State College, was in danger of being wiped out and the whole force of students and faculty of the college, numbering over 150 men, turned out and with shovels, brooms and brush aided the farmers in saving their homes.

This fire burned over a space of between four and five square miles. Several buildings in town were destroyed. These include a sawmill, near which was 800 cords of wood cut and piled up.

Three Fresh Meadows woodchoppers in a hut in the woods a mile and a half south of the college were surrounded by a wall of flames. Two of them escaped badly scorched, but could not tell where their companion was.

Tonight his charred body was found near the site of the shack. Near him was part of an oil can indicating that when he had found himself surrounded he had tried to start a back fire, but that the effort was of no avail.

The volunteer fire companies of several South county towns turned out and the only steam fire engine in the county was dragged from Wakefield to the Chepuxet river, where it was used to protect a farmhouse.

At Biscuit City, a negro settlement, the hundred or more inhabitants moved off with their household goods, but the houses were saved.

Another fire near the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad struck May 7 up toward the Washington county fair grounds, and so menacing had it become that at 10 o'clock to-night all of the horses that are stabled at the grounds had been moved outside the fire zone. It was later believed here that the flames would not reach the buildings in the grounds.

Fire in Oakland, near the town of Cranston, swept over fifty acres of timber land this afternoon. Another in Seekonk, just over the State line in Massachusetts, covered thirty acres.

Both the Attleboro and extensive fires today. In North Attleboro a tract three miles square was burned over and much standing timber was destroyed. In Attleboro the fire destroyed about eight acres to protect homes threatened by two fires.

In East Providence a blaze that covered forty acres at Narragansett Terrace and only stopped when it came to the salt water destroyed two homes and threatened the colony of cottages.

The ball park at Palace Gardens, a resort in Warwick, just escaped destruction today. The cover of the stadium and acres was burned over. Other distinct fires did damage in Johnston, Scituate, Hillsboro, Foxe and Phenix.

Hingham, Mass., was threatened by a grass fire that at 6 o'clock to-night had burned over five square miles of territory on the outskirts of this city is still uncontrolled. The fire zone is a mile long and the farmers for miles around are passing a night of fear.

The only hope that many of them have of saving their homes is in the fact that the wind has gone down since sundown and that 100 fire fighters are patrolling the boundaries of the fire district.

Three small buildings, including the house of Ernest E. McKenney, with everything in it, were burned shortly after the fire started at 11 o'clock this forenoon, and two hours later the flames had spread so rapidly that the cover of the stadium and acres was burned over. Other distinct fires did damage in Johnston, Scituate, Hillsboro, Foxe and Phenix.

Private Daniel May Nail and John Swamy fell suffocated by smoke in the pine woods, and when Sergt. Daniel Schofield at great risk to himself ran into the blazing forest to search for them he found the two dead and terribly burned.

He dragged them to a place of safety and they were revived.

WOODS AFIRE ON 3 SIDES.

Hundreds of Men Fight Flames Near Mays Landing, N. J.

MAYS LANDING, N. J., May 7.—Three forest fires surrounding this place today destroyed thousands of dollars worth of timber land before they were put out by hundreds of fire fighters. Automobiles on the county road from Philadelphia to Atlantic City had to pass through clouds of smoke. Trains on the electric railway between Meko City and Mays Landing passed through flames on either side of the tracks.

The first fire started east of here along the railroad near Meko City, the second southwest along the Downtown boulevard and the third between this place and Egg Harbor City.

One of the fires surrounded several farms. The farmers drenched the buildings with water and backfired. They saved their homes and main buildings, but a few sheds were destroyed.

Before the flames frightened rabbits and several deer were seen running. At nightfall the fires were under control and most of the fighters had gone home.

CHILDREN GIVE $7,000.

Lenten Pennies for Missions Presented at the Episcopal Cathedral.

Two thousand Sunday school children went to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine yesterday afternoon to present their Lenten gifts to missions. Their service closed just before the evening prayer began and a thousand others filled the exits, and it was fifteen minutes before the children got out and the adult worshippers got in. Bishop Greer has asked the Cathedral Club, composed of young men of the Cathedral congregation, to assist in handling the crowds.

Sunday school children of the Episcopal Church throughout the country during Lent make contributions to world missions. Their total gifts amount to about $150,000 a year. In this diocese schools send class delegates to a public service at which the Lenten gifts are presented. Hereof the Cathedral of St. John the Divine has been the scene of several such services in a church and five or six hundred children have attended. This year for the first time it was in the cathedral. The amount of the New York children's gifts yesterday was $7,120, or nearly $2,000 more than last year. A banner presented by St. Thomas's school to the school giving the most per member was won by St. James's school, Madison avenue and Seventy-first street, where the children gave an average of $2.30 each. Presentation of the banner to this school was made by the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires.

ARREST FOR STANDING AUTOS.

Magistrate McAdoo to Decide if Police Have Authority to Make Them.

Chief Magistrate McAdoo on May 11 is going to consider whether the police are acting with proper authority in arresting the proprietors of certain sight-seeing wagons for allowing their cars to stand in front of their offices at such a place that they seem to interfere with traffic.

In the case in question Orville Dickenson, lessee of the Hotel Bartholdi and the owner of the Green Sight Seeing Car Company, had been arrested for allowing two of his cars to remain for several hours in front of 936 Broadway and making a few cars below. The chauffeurs of the two cars were arrested too.

The case was adjourned till May 11. Magistrate McAdoo said he was in doubt as to the right of the police to prevent the lessee of property from leaving his vehicle in front of his place of business. He was going to suggest to Inspector O'Brien that he refrain from making more arrests of that nature until the present case shall be decided.

STRANGED WITH BOOK STRAP.

College Professor Buckles Halter Around His Neck and Pulls Till Death Comes.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., May 7.—"I have made a failure of life. Please look over what I have done."

This message, addressed to his wife, was found beside the body of Prof. Fred Lemar Charles of the University of Illinois when colleagues broke open the door of his room last night.

He had buckled an ordinary bookstrap around his neck and then pulled it until he succeeded in shutting off his breath. So horrible and torturing was this method that the professor must have possessed an iron intent, say his faculty associates.

Charles was assistant professor of agriculture. For six weeks he had been affected with insomnia. In the last five years he had had two attacks of nervous prostration. Friends declare that there was no cause for him to accuse himself of being a failure in life, as he held a responsible position in the faculty.

Prof. Charles was 38 years old and left a wife and two children. He was a graduate of Northwestern University and came to Champaign from Urbana, Ill., from the Normal School at Dekalb two years ago.
